

Board of Trustees names Garretson as new member, elects officers

Gallaudet University's Board of Trustees, meeting on campus Oct. 11 and 12, named Dr. Mervin Garretson as its newest member.

Garretson, who retired from Gallaudet in January 1990, is the temporary executive director of the National Association of the Deaf. A Gallaudet graduate, he taught at both the Maryland School for the Deaf and Montana School for the Deaf, where he later became principal, before returning to Gallaudet to teach in the Graduate School of Education.

Garretson became principal of MSSD in 1970. Five years later, he was named special assistant to the president at Gallaudet, a position he remained in through four different presidents, later delaying his retirement to serve as chairman of The Deaf Way Conference and Festival held in July 1989.

"I look forward to working with him and learning from him," said Board Chairman Philip Bravin.

The board also elected new officers. Bravin will remain chairman of the board; Judge Thomas Jackson is the new vice chairman; Dr. Robert Sanderson is the secretary; and Dr. Philip Sprinkle is the treasurer. John Yeh is a new member of the executive committee.

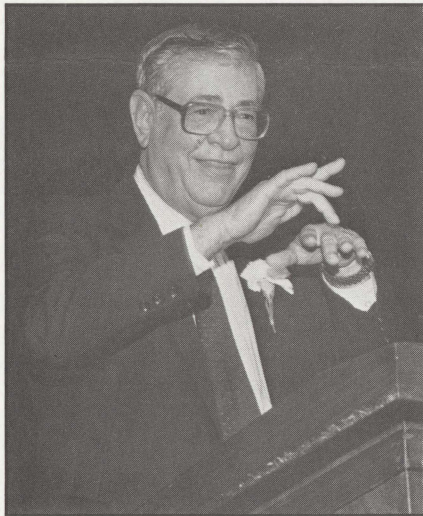

In his report on the status of the University, President I. King Jordan reported that an architect has been hired for renovation of Hall Memorial Building, and stone for renovating the exterior of Chapel Hall has been found.

Jordan also reported that the University is looking into acquiring Hamilton Junior High School, which borders the University on Sixth Street. The school is now vacant except for one program that will close in December.

The status of the University's application for a Kellogg Foundation grant of $15 million to build a center for learning should be known within two or three weeks, Jordan said.

The University also has a new agreement with Digital Equipment Corporation to receive new computing equipment almost free for a year. The University will then purchase the equipment if it receives the federal funds for equipment requested in the Fiscal Year 1992 budget. The new equipment will triple the computing power at the University, Jordan said, and should improve the speed of E-mail.

Senate considers sign evaluation

Gallaudet's Faculty Senate met Oct. 15 to consider a number of proposed changes to the University's guidelines governing the evaluation of faculty members' sign communication skills.

The senate was expected to act on the changes, prepared by Committee A (Faculty Welfare) after almost two years of debating over the proposed Sign Communication Proficiency Interview (SCPI) evaluation method. During the past two years, SCPI has been used on a trial basis along with the SimCom evaluation currently in the guidelines.

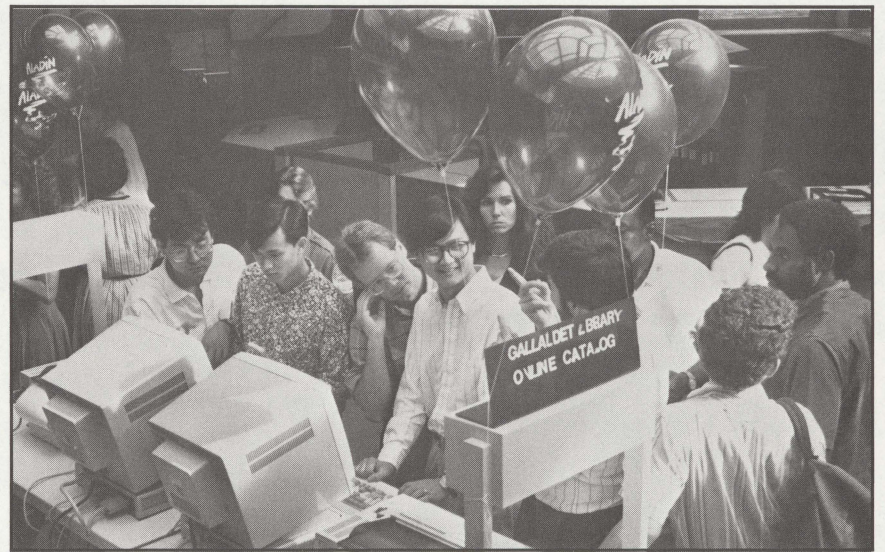

After four hours of discussion, however, the senate had covered only about half of Committee A's recommended changes, and a second meeting was scheduled for Oct. 22. A special meeting of the University Faculty is tentatively set for Nov. 12 to vote on the guidelines changes.

Mark Weinberg, chairman of Committee A, said that because there are conflicting views by faculty on the sign evaluation procedure, Committee A and a five-member panel representing various campus departments had "developed an approach both sensible and workable."

Under Committee A's recommendations, the 30-minute SCPI evaluations would be conducted by a three-member faculty panel picked from a pool of 10 raters trained in the SCPI method. They would rate individual performance based on physical production, use of grammar, vocabulary, fluency, and comprehension.

Faculty would be required to achieve at least an "intermediate-plus" rating to demonstrate satisfactory sign proficiency. Once this rating is achieved, faculty would not be required to be evaluated again, unlike the SimCom method, which requires that faculty be re-evaluated every three years. However, faculty appointed to tenure-track positions after the guidelines go into effect would be required to attain an "advanced" rating to be eligible for tenure.

Nontraditional students increase here as enrollment reaches all-time high Enrollment at Gallaudet reached an all-time high of 2,406 this fall, according to a report released recently by the University's Office of Enrollment Services.

While there was a slight decline in new prep and freshmen entering Gallaudet—which is in line with the national trend in colleges and universities, according to Astrid Goodstein, executive director of Enrollment Services—the overall enrollment is up five percent since 1987, the University's previous highest enrollment. Gallaudet's capacity is 2,200 to 2,400 students.

Professional academic advising, which was started at the University two years ago, plays an important role in retaining students, Goodstein said. Other units, such as Student Affairs, also help keep enrollment figures up, she said.

Goodstein credited Gallaudet President I. King Jordan, Board of Trustees Chairman Philip Bravin, and the Alumni Relations Office for their continuing help in attracting students. In new admissions, a total of 1,185 students applied to attend Gallaudet this year, and 69 percent—815—were accepted.

A breakdown of overall enrollment figures shows that 288 students are enrolled at Northwest Campus in three different programs: School of Preparatory Studies (245), English Language Institute (20), and Office Systems Program (23).

In undergraduate programs, 1,559 students are enrolled, including five visiting students and one exchange student. In graduate programs, 443 students are enrolled. An additional 116 students are taking non-degree sign language classes.

The overall percentage of minority students enrolled at the University is within Gallaudet's traditional range—11 percent undergraduate and eight percent graduate. International student enrollment remains at last year's level of 12 percent.

The average age of undergraduates is 23, and the number of students over the age of 25 jumped from 310 last year to 467 this year, which Goodstein said indicates a growing nontraditional student population at Gallaudet.

TV decoder act becomes law

The Television Decoder Circuitry Act of 1990 became law on Oct. 15, and with it the United States may well lead the world into a new era of television.

The law, which was passed by the House of Representatives Oct. 1 and was held the required 10 days in President George Bush's office before becoming law, dictates that by July 1, 1993, closed caption decoder circuitry must be installed in all new television sets with 13-inch screens or larger that are sold in the United States.

"Soon, with a touch of the remote, the benefits of closed captioning will reach every American home," said Sy DuBow, legal director of the National Center for Law and the Deaf. "This increased audience provides the market incentive for a strong self-sustaining captioning service."

DuBow and President I. King Jordan were among those who testified at both House and Senate subcommittee hearings on behalf of the legislation.

Crime Report

The following criminal activities at Gallaudet from Sept. 29 to Oct. 15 were reported by the Department of Safety and Security (DOSS). Crimes such as minor vandalisms, simple assaults, and petty thefts occurring in predominantly student areas have been omitted. No suspects were identified unless otherwise noted.

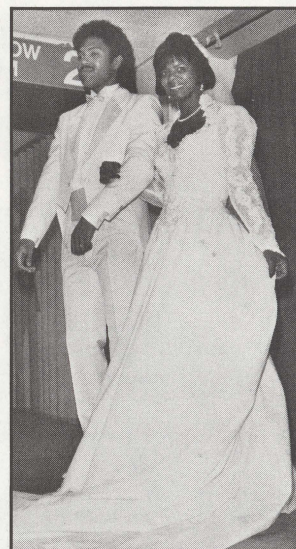

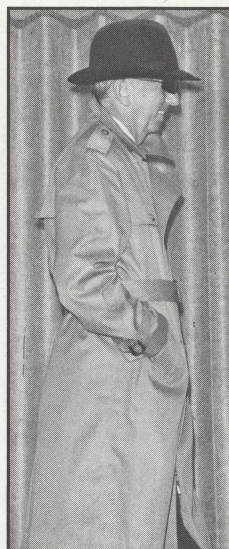

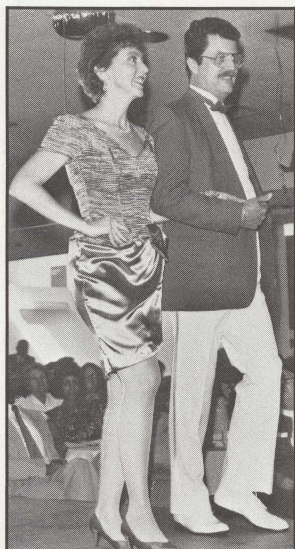

- 10/2—Theft from an automobile in the Benson Hall parking lot.
- 10/4—Burglary at University property located at 1636 Montello Ave. NE.
- 10/6—Theft from an automobile in the HMB parking lot.
- 10/7—A suspect was arrested in connection with the robbery of a Gallaudet employee who was held up at gunpoint Sept. 14 as she parked her car at the Gatehouse.
- 10/11—It was concluded after an investigation of a Sept. 20 report of a burglary that the incident was unfounded; a citizen complained about disorderly conduct by Northwest Campus students; a burglary took place at the University Bookstore; a student was reportedly robbed by another student.
- 10/12—An attempted theft from a car took place behind Clerc Hall.
- 10/14—A Gallaudet visitor was the victim of an assault and attempted robbery at the Farragut West metro station; a Gallaudet student was assaulted in the 7700 block of Georgia Ave., NW. Both incidents are under investigation by the Metropolitan Police Department.

Staff Advisory Committee seeks nominations to fill six vacancies

The Staff Advisory Committee (SAC) is soliciting nominations to fill six vacancies on the committee. SAC elections will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 28.

The Staff Advisory Committee serves as a liaison between Gallaudet staff members and policy-making bodies on campus. The group reviews and helps develop new policies and procedures related to staff and meets regularly with President I. King Jordan to make recommendations and share information.

The six vacancies that need to be filled for the term beginning on Jan. 1, 1991, include two one-year slots and four two-year slots. The number is unusually high because it reflects campus-wide reorganization, expiration of committee members' terms, and resignations from the group.

Board increases tuition, revises educational assistance

Jordan also announced that Peter Jennings of ABC-TV's "World News Tonight" has agreed to speak at the University's 1991 commencement.

The board approved increases in University tuition and fees for the 1991-92 academic year totaling 9.3 percent for full-time American students: 7.5 percent for tuition, 15.2 percent for room, and 5.4 percent for board. This represents the final year of a three-year agreement with the National Technical Institute for the Deaf and the U.S. Department of Education. The new tuition will be $3,584; room will be $2,650, and board will be $1,960. International student tuition also was increased 7.5 percent, to $5,376.

Revisions to the policy on educational assistance were approved. The assistance was increased from $1,800 to $2,000 and is now extended to full-time faculty members. It may be used for course work required for promotion and tenure or for training related to University objectives. Tuition assistance for interpreters has been eliminated from the policy because various laws provide for adequate interpreting services. Only employees who voluntarily leave are required to reimburse the University, and the requirement to remain employed for a year following completion of a course has been eliminated.

After long discussion, the board passed a resolution approving revisions to the communication policy in the University Faculty Guidelines, which was passed by the University Faculty last April. This policy states, in part, "The University Faculty is now committed to a working model of a bilingual (American Sign Language and English), multicultural community where deaf, hard of hearing, and hearing people can learn and work together without communication barriers."

The Committee on Academic Affairs asked, however, that concern about the wording of the last sentence be noted in the minutes. The sentence reads, "The term, American Sign Language (ASL), is to be used in an all-

Jordan receives victory award

Gallaudet President I. King Jordan was one of five recipients of the 1990 Victory Awards at an Oct. 15 ceremony at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

The awards, which are sponsored by the National Rehabilitation Hospital of Washington, D.C., pays tribute to individuals who have overcome physical disabilities and/or emotional suffering to make impressive contributions to society.

Other award recipients this year included entertainers Patty Duke and Ben Vereen, both of whom have battled emotional disorders and substance abuse.

Hosts for the Victory Awards ceremony included Marlee Matlin, Stacy Keach, Loretta Lynn, Peter Yarrow, and the Lettermen. President George Bush and Barbara Bush served as honorary chairpeople.

inclusive sense, even including signs expressed in English word order, with or without voice—in much the same way many deaf and hard of hearing people communicate among themselves and with hearing people."

"Perhaps the wording could be rewritten to make it a little more clear," said Board Member Carol Padden.

Sabbatical leave requests were approved for the following faculty: College of Arts and Sciences—Dr. Hoy Booker, Mathematics/Computer Science; Dr. John Christiansen, Sociology; Dr. Joseph Grigely, English; Janet Pray, Social Work; and Dr. Samuel Trychin, Psychology; School of Education and Human Services—Dr. Donna Mertens, Educational Foundations and Research; School of Communication—Dr. David Tweedie, Audiology and Speech-Language Pathology; and Dr. Sally Revoile, Graduate Studies and Research.

Evon Black, recruiter/marketing assistant for the Office Systems Program and recruiter for the English Language Institute, both at the Northwest Campus, was named to replace Kathryn Baldrige on the Laurent Clerc Cultural Fund (LCCF) committee. Baldrige's second term on the LCCF expires in December.

Russian visitors share information about lives of deaf people in USSR

Members of the Gallaudet community got an inside look into the lives of deaf people living in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR) when three deaf Russians visited the University Oct. 7-9.

The Russians came to Gallaudet for the USA/USSR Deaf Chess Tournaments/Workshops, sponsored by the Student Body Government and University Center. But they also came to share information about deaf people in both countries.

Igor Abramov, an engineer who now works as the full-time, paid leader of the Moscow Association of the Deaf, told a group gathered in the Abbey on Oct. 8 that before perestroika, deaf people in the USSR were very oppressed, as were all people with disabilities. Since perestroika, however, newspapers have published articles about the problems deaf people face, and Parliament has started to identify these problems.

Most deaf people live without hearing aids, and many do not have flashing signal systems or TDDs, said Abramov. The USSR has only a few sign language interpreters, and about 75 percent are unacceptable, he said, because there are no standards by which interpreters are trained or evaluated.

The USSR's deaf community is working toward better and more accessible assistive technology and interpreter training, and is trying to get its sign language recognized officially.

Vladimir Galchenko, an astronomical engineer and president of the USSR Chess Federation for the Deaf, spoke later in the day to a group gathered in Ely Auditorium. While the USSR's government allows deaf students to complete university programs, they often cannot find jobs in their fields and are often stuck in manufacturing-type jobs, he said. Even when they are employed in their field, they usually make less than their hearing peers.

Galchenko said his experience has shown that "if you can't communicate orally, you cannot become equal to your hearing peers [in the workplace]. Writing back and forth takes too much time."

When he returns to the USSR, he hopes to start a course in psychology of deaf people and how they can communicate with hearing people. "If we have no friends in the hearing world, we'll have controversies that emerge, and if deaf people do not belong to the hearing world, deaf people will continue to be oppressed," he said.

The third Russian in the visiting party was Sergei Salov, the champion deaf chess player in the USSR. He played two matches with the U.S. deaf champion, Russell Chauvenet, and each man won one. Salov also engaged 28 Gallaudet students in a simultaneous exhibition game in which he tied with one student and defeated the others.

Cable TV, now in Tech Support, provides many services

Cable Television Services, which previously operated under the Department of Television, Film, and Photography in the School of Communication, moved Oct. 1 to Technical Support Services, still within the School of Communication.

Cable Television provides the campus community with satellite communications, videotape dubbing services, an extensive videotape collection, and the campus Message Wheel.

Through Gallaudet's new satellite communications system, Cable Television can provide the campus community with teleconferences, lectures, workshops, foreign news broadcasts, and a wealth of other informative programming. Requests for satellite communications services must be made in advance and are accepted on a first-come, first-served basis.

The department will also copy or "dub" videotapes for campus personnel who own the rights to the tapes they wish to have copied. The small fee charged for this service covers the cost of the quality blank videotape used. While copies usually can be made quickly, the time required to complete a duplication varies with the overall workload of the department.

Cable Television's videotape collection is cataloged on the Gallaudet Library's on-line computer system, and tapes can be requested by phone. Calls should be made at least 15 minutes prior to the desired viewing time.

Faculty members may borrow tapes to use on campus for 48 hours and are encouraged to suggest that specific programs be copied from network television, or "off-air," to add to the collection. Current copyright law allows the department to copy such programs and to maintain those tapes for one year as long as they are used for

Barbara Jean ("BJ") Wood (left), commissioner of the Massachusetts Commission for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing, and Judith Sotherlund of the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs, were featured speakers at the women's conference Oct. 11-12.

Employment conference explores issues of concern to deaf women

About 90 women spent Oct. 11-12 on the Gallaudet campus exploring issues that concern working women by attending the conference "Getting Ahead in the 1990s: Deaf Women and Employment," sponsored by the National Academy's Professional and Community Training Program.

In addition to the 10 presentations and workshops offered during the two days, most of which were led by members of the Gallaudet community, were two featured speakers. Judith Sotherlund, special assistant to Cari Dominiquez, director of the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs (OFCCP) at the U.S. Department of Labor, spoke for Dominiquez, and Barbara Jean ("BJ") Wood, commissioner of the Massachusetts Commission for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing, gave the keynote address.

Sotherlund opened the conference with her presentation, "Shattering the Glass Ceiling," which explored how women, minorities, and people with disabilities often can see the upper-level management positions and aspire to them, but cannot break through the unseen barrier to those higher-level positions, which are held predominantly by white males.

Sotherlund explained that OFCCP monitors companies that receive government contracts to ensure that company policies do not discriminate against women, minorities, and people with disabilities. By examining how these companies attract, develop, and retain their employees, as well as the gender, racial, and impairment conditions these employees have, OFCCP frequently uncovers discrimination.

When discrimination is found, the OFCCP recommends policy changes at the company. If changes that eliminate discrimination do not occur within a designated time, the OFCCP can cancel the company's government contracts and keep new contracts from going to them, said Sotherlund.

Wood closed the conference with the keynote address, "Getting Ahead in the 1990s." Wood spoke about her own job history and noted that her volunteer work in the deaf community opened doors to many job opportunities. Based on her experience as a supervisor who has interviewed many job applicants and as an employee herself, Wood said that deaf women tend to have very weak interview skills. Deaf women need to improve their sense of self-confidence and their ability to describe themselves in an interview situation, she said.

"Hedda Gabler," the classic drama written by Henrik Ibsen, will be the fall production of the Gallaudet University Theatre Arts Department.

Homecoming sees defeats, victories

In a matchup between last year's Atlantic Collegiate Football Conference co-champions, St. John Fisher College of Rochester, N.Y., defeated Gallaudet University 6-0 at the Bison's homecoming game on Oct. 13.

Fisher's Larry Jay scored field goals of 27 and 22 yards in the first half of the game. Gallaudet came close to evening the score in the third quarter when the Bison worked their way to Fisher's nine yard line, but, even after four pass plays, the Bison couldn't gain more yardage.

The Bison, which stood at 0-6 for the season last week, have been plagued by problems in their offensive line. At the homecoming game, the Bison, normally a rushing team, were held by their opponents to 24 yards.

Defensively, Gallaudet held Fisher to only 43 yards passing. The Bison defensive line was led by junior Toselli Silvestri. The linebacker was responsible for eight solo tackles, nine assists, one interception, and one sack.

On the offense, Gallaudet freshman quarterback Mike Rivera completed nine of 21 passes for 114 yards. The top Bison receiver was sophomore Mike Flynn, who made two receptions for 40 yards, gained 19 yards on punt returns, and 66 yards on kickoffs. Gallaudet was 0-11 on third down conversions.

In other homecoming sports events, the soccer team defeated Goucher College of Baltimore 3-1. The volleyball team finished fourth of 10 teams competing in an invitational meet sponsored by Shar Con, a Washington, D.C., advertising agency. In cross country, senior Richard Sahlin finished twelfth out of 80 runners in a 10 kilometer race at the University of the District of Columbia.
